Local First Software

For a decade the default answer to every software question was the cloud. Notes and documents lived on someone else’s server.

The appeal is simple. When the work happens on your own machine it keeps working on a plane.

Second page paragraph one stays on its own page.

Third page text.